Data Protection

The Data Protection Act 1998 came into force on 1 March 2000. Under the Data Protection Act, anyone processing personal information must comply with eight principles of good information handling. The eight principles state that the data must be:

fairly and lawfully processed;
processed for limited purposes;
adequate, relevant and not excessive;
accurate and up to date;
not kept longer than necessary;
processed in accordance with the individual's rights;
secure;
not transferred to countries outside the European Economic area, unless there is adequate protection.

In dealing with us you have provided/may provide us with personal data about yourself.

Body Sculpt is committed to following policies which protect your privacy and comply with current international data protection laws and regulations in respect of personal data.

Please note that the information that you provide to us is processed and held on computer systems and the files and, in certain cases, companies who process data on behalf of the group, its advisers and financial intermediaries and credit reference agencies with whom it works. Where we do pass data to third parties appropriate confidentiality arrangements are in place.

Your personal data may be held and processed in connection with a transaction we look at with/for you, our normal general development of our business, and for administrative purposes relating to those activities. We reserve the right to hold this data until you indicate that you wish us to do otherwise.

If you provide us with personal data in relation to Body Sculpt people programmes, please note that you thereby consent to the following, which may entail the provision of your personal data to third parties:

- Performing credit/authentication checks
- Taking up external references, including the use of referencing agencies
- Provision of information to other Body Sculpt companies and offices, which may be located outside the European Union, in connection with the administration of the programmes
- Disclosure of personal information to investee companies as part of the process of placing directors
- Ongoing recording, processing and updating of personal data in the normal course of administering the programmes
- Obtaining and providing feedback of a formal and informal nature on individual performance as part of these programmes
- Advising us in writing of any changes to your personal data
- Advising us in writing of any confidentiality issues which may arise as a result of the disclosure or processing of your personal data in the course of normal administration of the programmes.

Apart from the above, we do not disclose your personal data to any other third parties, except where you have given your consent or we have a legal obligation to do so.
